ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Aaron B. Maduff is a member of Maduff & Maduff, LLC, a national law firm dedicated to the practice of employment law. Prior to law school at the University of Iowa, Mr. Maduff had a background in rape victim advocacy, which led to an interest in practicing sexual harassment law, something he has done since his first day as a licensed attorney.

Mr. Maduff is licensed in Colorado, the District of Columbia, Illinois, Minnesota, Ohio, and more than 20 federal jurisdictions, including the Supreme Court of the United States. He is Board Certified as a specialist in Labor and Employment Law by the State of Ohio. He holds an AV rating from Martindale-Hubbell. Mr. Maduff has been recognized by SuperLawyers since 2007, and is listed with the Top 100 Trial Lawyers (National Trial Lawyers). Mr. Maduff has served on the Executive Board of the National Employment Lawyers’ Association (NELA), as well as its Illinois Chapter. He is a past chair of the Chicago Bar Association’s Labor and Employment Law Section and sits on the Section Council for the Illinois State Bar Association’s Labor and Employment Law Section.

Mr. Maduff has filed amicus briefs before appellate courts, including the Supreme Courts of Illinois and Indiana. He has testified on employment law to the Illinois Senate and General Assembly. He drafted portions of the Illinois Equal Pay Act of 2003, and was a leading voice in the passage of the Amendment to the Illinois Human Rights Act permitting sexual harassment and discrimination cases to proceed in state court. Mr. Maduff has taught courses on employment law at both the undergraduate and graduate level. He is a frequent speaker on employment law issues to such organizations as NELA and its 7th Circuit and Illinois chapters; the Illinois State Bar Association; the Chicago Bar Association; and the Council for Legal Education Opportunity.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

First and foremost, I must acknowledge Elizabeth (Libby) Hubbard, the prior author of this book, whom I have been fortunate to call a mentor and friend. Libby’s practice has spanned nearly 40 years, and her contributions to the field of employment law are immeasurable. I am honored to continue this book where she left off.

I would also like to acknowledge Lisa Dunne, my editor, whose guidance and insight make this book possible.

Finally, a sexual harassment lawyer does not succeed on his or her own. The practice of law in this area, and in employment law generally, is always a team effort with the clients we represent. It is never easy for a victim of sexual harassment to fight back, and my clients have included women and men, as well as minors, who have shown resiliency and determination under the most traumatic of circumstances. Much of what I have learned from them is reflected in this book.
Editor's Note: Elizabeth Hubbard wrote the second edition of Litigating Sexual Harassment & Sex Discrimination Cases in 1997. She wrote every annual supplement from 1998-2011. We proudly acknowledge her contributions to this book and her dedication and commitment to this work.
PREVIOUS AUTHOR

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

The National Employment Lawyers Association, a nation-wide organization of plaintiff’s employment rights attorneys, has worked tirelessly for decades to advance the rights of employees, and deserves thanks for the dedication of its members. Even though members are rather in competition with each other for cases, the members work cooperatively through chat groups and meetings to advance employment rights for employees.

I also wish to acknowledge and thank Lisa Dunne, the editor of this book, for her efforts to deliver a fine result for our readers.

An Acknowledgment is also due to Pat Swanson, a former client of our firm, whose case of Swanson v. Elmhurst Chrysler Plymouth, Inc., was lost on appeal at the Seventh Circuit. The court could find no equitable remedy for her, despite the egregious sexual harassment she endured while credit manager for the dealership. The court implied in its opinion that the law needed to be changed. Pat was contacted by Senator Kennedy to testify before the Senate for the passage of the 1991 amendments to the Civil Rights Act. Pat did testify and returned to Congress to lobby for the passage of the Act, which was accomplished in November, 1991. She is one of the many unknown and unsung heroines in the long struggle to obtain decent and respectable working conditions for women.

Elizabeth Hubbard
ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Elizabeth (Libby) Hubbard is the principal in Elizabeth Hubbard Law Firm LLC in Chicago, Illinois. Libby represents plaintiffs and employers in employment rights cases. (For additional information, visit www.ehubbardlaw.com.) Ms. Hubbard graduated with honors from Chicago-Kent College of Law, having served as Articles Editor of law review. She is a frequent speaker on employment discrimination issues. She was co-counsel on the case of Marek v. Chesney, 473 U.S. 1 (1985), which established the parameters of Rule 68 offers of judgment. Ms. Hubbard has tried numerous jury trials to verdict in federal courts. Ms. Hubbard has been active in the Illinois chapter of the National Employment Lawyers Association, most recently as treasurer.
